East Hills JCC Hosts Clothing Drive for Nonprofit

The Early Childhood Center at East Hills' Sid Jacobson Jewish Community Center (JCC) hosted an infant clothing drive for Baby Buggy, a non-profit organization dedicated to providing New York City families in need with essential equipment, clothing and products for their infants and young children. Committee Chair Donna Liebowitz said of the event, "When I was contacted by Baby Buggy and asked if I could help out with a local drive it was a no-brainer for me. We were able to get the community involved and show people how much their contributions mean to families who are hurting, particularly in this difficult economic time." In total, as many as 750 bottles of baby formula and 43 bags of clothing was donated to Baby Buggy. "In the end we managed to fill an entire mid-sized moving truck. It was amazing!" JCC member Allison Okun stated. "To be able to give someone in need something that they badly need was an incredibly rewarding experience."
